

Easy Housekeeping Methods Plainly Taught

Mayor Harley O. White Will Open Capital Journal's Cooking School for Better Food and Better Homes, by Introducing Mrs. Vaughn, at the Armory, Monday Afternoon, at 2:30

NOTICE!

In order to get the full benefit of The Capital Journal Home Economics School, be sure to attend every day, beginning Monday, June 5 at 2:30.

To Be Held at the Armory

Helpful advice in regard to scientific housekeeping methods will be given by Mrs. Kate Brew Vaughn, the cookery expert who will lecture in the armory next week under the auspices of the Capital Journal. This instruction is not technical nor hard to follow. Mrs. Vaughn's talks are simple and clear and her methods are of the kind that women who do their own work can take home with them and apply in the household management. No Ordinary Cooking School In one city where Mrs. Vaughn was lecturing she overheard a woman in a hotel say, "No, I am not attending. I never did care for cooking schools or poultry shows." The woman of Salem are assured that they will miss a great deal by not attending Mrs. Vaughn's lectures and cookery lessons here. They are not in the nature of poultry shows and are not on a parallel with the ordinary cooking schools. She is one of the finest Better Foods Better Homes lecturers in the country, who in her talks encourages women to look upon housekeeping as a profession and cooking as a very necessary and important art. Many easy methods and short cuts will be suggested in her new program that will lighten the labors of the woman who does her own work without in any way detracting from the efficiency of her services as housekeeper and homemaker. Don't Be A Drone "There is no reason in the world," asserts Mrs. Vaughn, "why a woman should be a slave to her own home. I am not trying to advocate anything socialistic or radical. I believe much can be done to emancipate women from household drudgery by scientific management. If men had been doing housework for as many years as women have, they would long ago have eliminated the waste of energies that is everywhere to be seen, and would have introduced a system and efficient business methods to their housekeeping." The Capital Journal's second Better Foods Better Homes school is a home-making course for women, and all house-

NAVAL BILL PASSES BY VOTE OF 358 TO 4

Carries Appropriations of $180,000,000 and Is Largest Ever Passed

Washington, June 2.—The House this afternoon passed the administration naval bill. The vote was 358 to 4.

Washington, June 2.—News of the 24 hour naval battle between the British and German fleets in the North sea spread like wildfire among members of the House, fighting over details of the naval bill, to be voted on this afternoon.

The reported destruction of 12 or more British vessels and the damaging of many others by a German fleet, said to be smaller in number, was immediately grasped as an argument by many for a larger United States navy than proposed in the bill.

The bill, with the biggest naval appropriation ever reported, has a building program to cost $180,000,000. It was understood the republican minority would attempt to have the bill re-committed with instructions to add two dreadnaughts to the program.

The Tillman plan for $11,000,000 government owned armor plate plant carried as amended, by a vote of 235 to 136.

A last minute effort to obtain a large building program failed when the House rejected by a vote of 183 to 183 Representative Browning's motion to recommit with instructions to the committee to change the bill so as to provide for two dreadnaughts, six battle cruisers, six scout cruisers, 50 submarines, 28 destroyers, two fuel ships and material increase in personnel.

Warden Minto Thanks Salem Fire Department

In a letter to the mayor and council Warden J. W. Minto extended his thanks for the service rendered during the recent fire as follows: "Permit me to congratulate yourselves and the city you represent upon the splendid organization you have provided in the form of the Salem Fire Department. We had on the 18th a good demonstration of its promptness, intelligent discipline and effectiveness, in the response made when fire assailed the shops of this institution and threatened their destruction and that of their valuable contents. Your fire department was on hand in an inconceivably short space of time and soon rendered such service that the flames were checked before the really important parts of the building were damaged."

PERTINENT PREPAREDNESS FOR THE POULTRYMAN

By C. C. Lamb, Extension Poultry Specialist, O. A. C.

When the chicks are weaned away from the hens or brooders, and other farm work begins to press, don't forget that the growing flock still needs careful attention. Your reward of first eggs laid by the pullets about November 1 will be determined by how well you have kept the birds developing under favorable conditions.

A 6 inch by 8 inch open front, shed roof, portable colony house furnishes an ideal shelter for maturing chickens on the range. One hundred chicks can be accommodated in a house this size until the cockerels are about broiler size, when they should be separated and sold or moved to other quarters. Usually all the pullets may remain in the house until mature.

A splendid place to locate the colony house is along the edge of a corn field or sun flower patch or in an orchard. Plenty of great food should be available during the entire summer. Summer kale or rape makes good green foods during the dry season when properly handled.

Now is the time to plan the supply of green food for next winter's layers. Provide for a patch of kale or some other crop of succulents for winter use.

Be sure that the chicks are roasting on perches as soon as old enough. There is usually trouble ahead if they huddle together at night in a corner.

Fresh ground, free range and plenty of shade are important and profitable factors in raising poultry.

If individuals become diseased, kill by cracking (or dislocating) the neck, and burn the carcass.

The colony house should be dry and well ventilated and free from draughts.

Drinking and feed dishes always need frequent cleaning.

Never relax vigilance in watching for lice and mites.

Keepers in Salem are invited to attend Mrs. Vaughn's endeavor to give to women already engaged in making and keeping homes, the sort of domestic science training their daughters are receiving in the high schools. Information intended to serve the women of this generation, to improve the homes and bring greater comfort and happiness in each day's work, is included in Mrs. Vaughn's lecture and cookery course.

Good cooks and cooks not so good, housekeepers successful and otherwise, club women, domestic science teachers and students, brides and business women are all invited to attend the Capital Journal's second Better Foods Better Homes school in the armory next week. All are sure to gain much valuable knowledge in regard to the ordinary and homely art of preparing three good meals a day. The school opens Monday at two-thirty with a splendid program. MILITARY TRAINING. President D. G. Seefield of the Standard Oil company (California), announces that this company intends permitting a reasonable number of its employees to attend the Regular Army Instruction camp at Monterey, between July 5th and August 10th, and will grant such employees four weeks' leave of absence for this purpose, without prejudice to their advancement and without loss of salary. "That announcement and the one made a couple of years ago, when the company stated that any employee who responded to a call to arms in the state or national military or naval service at a time of war or other emergency would not jeopardize his position with the company, are declarations of policy bearing, not on 'preparedness,' says President Seefield, "but on the relations of employer and employee. "The company wants to impress upon every employee that he is a free agent when the question of service to his country is concerned, entirely free to act as his sense of patriotism may direct, and in such contingency has the unqualified approval of his employers."
